Together, we can solve hunger.

During a typical school year, families and school-age children have access to supplemental food in an environment that is both familiar and supportive. School Pantries stock popular, easy-to-prepare food items such as fruit, canned tuna, peanut butter and pasta.

Recognizing the Need

Early in the Backpack Program, The Foodbank staff recognized that more than 80% of participating students were sharing their weekend food with siblings and parents. Rather than adding more food to the Backpacks, program specialists decided that a better solution would be to provide families with food through a pantry set up inside the school where access would be convenient for students and family alike.

Since its inception in 2010, the School Pantry program has been responsible for distributing more than a million pounds of food to families in need.

Making an Impact

Not far from the Clearwater River in Lewis County sits the Kamiah Elementary, Middle, and High Schools. Terry runs the School Pantry on the school campus and she works hard to help Kamiah children and families get the assistance they need. In addition to being a very rural county, it is estimated that 20 percent of children in Lewis County are food insecure.

The Kamiah School Pantry is open after school for two days a week during the school year. Approximately 25 families visit the school pantry each week. When someone visits the school pantry they are greeted by Terry or one of her volunteers. They walk with the family through the pantry to help them pick out their food. This is also an opportunity to talk about their struggles and share information with the family about other resources that are available to help. In addition to shelf-stable food, the pantry’s refrigerators and freezers allow them to provide perishable food items for families. Terry has also co-located other services with the pantry, including a closet of donated clothes that students can visit if they are in need.

When food for the Kamiah School Pantry arrives from The Idaho Foodbank, Terry enlists student volunteers to help unload the food. This is a great way for students to better understand some of the need in their community and contribute to the solutions.

“One family we had been working with was in a hotel. We were able to help her get a crockpot and then shop the pantry to create some meals for her kids. She was very excited to be able to provide well rounded meals for her kids.”

“We got the school counselor involved and came to realize that his [a student’s] situation was very dire. He really needed this food. He considered himself responsible for helping to feed 4 younger siblings. He has since become one of our favorite students. If he sees us packing things downstairs, he rushes to help.”
