Direct & Indirect Food Distribution: The Idaho Foodbank operates warehouse facilities in Meridian, Lewiston, and Pocatello, distributing donated and purchased food to a statewide network of over 400 Partner Agencies in all 44 Idaho counties. Partner Agencies include schools, churches, pantries, soup kitchens, senior centers, and supplemental food programs. For communities that lack a brick-and-mortar food pantry or special populations that require supplemental food support, The Idaho Foodbank conducts scheduled mobile pantry deliveries of fresh, dry and frozen food. The Idaho Foodbank distributed over 25.3 million pounds of food - providing food for up to 21 million meals - through partner agencies and its own direct-service programs throughout the state of Idaho. When food is purchased, volume buying power maximized the return on donor contributions to such a degree that one dollar can provide food for up to three meals. The Idaho Foodbank, through its Food Rescue program, captured and distributed to those in need over 8.7 million pounds of surplus food from growers, processors, and distribution to families. The work is largely done by volunteers. During the fiscal year 71,377 hours were donated by 25,226 volunteers, the equivalent of 34 full-time employees.

Form 990, Part III, Line 4c - Health & Nutrition: Recognizing that food is a social determinant of health, The Idaho Foodbank's Health & Nutrition team works in close collaboration with coalitions, healthcare organizations, and communities across the state to address food insecurity and improve overall community health. Over the past fiscal year, the team actively participated in 20 regional and local community health coalitions, attended or presented at 15 conferences and seminars, and hosted two regional partner conferences along with a partner open house. These activities helped deepen shared understanding of the critical link between hunger and health, engaging audiences that included Foodbank partner agencies, healthcare collaborators, university partners, social service providers, and community stakeholders. To increase access to essential non-food resources, the team distributed 187 quarterly resource boxes. These boxes contained 27 unique materials offering statewide information on housing, education, healthcare, economic well-being, home energy assistance, mental health services, supplemental nutrition programs, and care navigation resources. Strengthening partnerships with healthcare providers remained a priority. The team contributed to regional health improvement plans, hosted 8 health fairs at pantry sites, and collaborated with St. Luke's to improve food access in rural community schools in Southwest Idaho. Additionally, the team mentored 30 nursing students through service-based learning projects and supported a three-year community medicine project in partnership with a resident physician. Nutrition Education: The team continued to expand its nutrition education programming across the state this last fiscal year. A total of 19 Cooking Matters courses were delivered, engaging 521 participants. These included Cooking Matters series classes for Adults, Families, Kids, and Teens. These multi-week, evidence-based courses empower individuals and families with the knowledge and skills to shop for and prepare healthy meals on a limited budget. Recognizing that attending a full six-week class series can be difficult, especially for neighbors in more rural areas, the team began offering stand-alone, topic-specific Cooking Matters classes tailored to community needs. Seventeen of these one-time classes were offered, serving an additional 196 participants across Idaho. The team also conducted 11 Cooking Matters at the Store tours, reaching 64 participants. These one-day guided grocery store tours teach participants how to shop for healthy, affordable food while learning budgeting tips, nutrition label reading, and strategies to stretch food dollars. Beyond structured classes, the Nutrition Education team led numerous food demonstrations at partner pantries, schools, community events, and within The Idaho Foodbank's warehouses. These interactive sessions highlight how to prepare healthy meals using items available from pantry distributions. For example, when an unfamiliar variety of squash was donated by a local grower last summer, an IFB team member demonstrated how to prepare it, provided tastings, and shared simple recipe, empowering neighbors to confidently cook and enjoy a new, healthy vegetable at home. Access & Equity: To improve access and equity, the Health & Nutrition team used translation services to connect non-English speakers with food assistance and direct food deliveries. They also ran team bilingual social media campaigns for SNAP, WIC, and healthcare open enrollment, reaching nearly 160,000 English and Spanish speaking Idahoans with critical information. The Health & Nutrition team is guided by a commitment to understanding community needs through authentic relationship-building and collaboration, and to exploring innovative, sustainable solutions to improve health outcomes across Idaho.
