Nourishing Today for a Food-Secure Tomorrow

The Idaho Foodbank

Moscow Annual Partner Conference Agenda

April 8, 2026 - University Inn, Moscow

Welcome
Hy'D Andrews, Regional Director - North Central Idaho, The Idaho Foodbank
Keith Mason, CEO of United Healthcare Community Plan

Nourishing Today for a Food-Secure Tomorrow
Randy Ford, President & CEO of The Idaho Foodbank
Randy will share The Foodbank's 2030 vision and how we are working with the partner network to "Nourish Today for a Food-Secure Tomorrow."

State of the Sector
Bill Pfinsgraff, Idaho Community Foundation, Philanthropic Advisor, North
What can nonprofits do to prepare their organizations to navigate the challenges facing the human services sector? This session will help you better understand the current sector landscape, provide resources and practical strategies for organizational sustainability, and confidence in how to begin planning for funding uncertainty.

> Prior to joining the Idaho Community Foundation; Bill worked in sales and marketing mainly with Elysian Brewing. He has a Bachelor's Degree in Environmental Science from Allegheny College where he also played hockey and occasionally revisits that pastime with local games of pond hockey in the winter. He has lived in Sandpoint and Coeur d'Alene and loves the outdoor opportunities that North Idaho provides him and his family. He is an avid skier, biker, golfer and swimmer. If he's not enjoying an active hobby, you can find him tinkering on his 1968 International Scout 800.
> Bill is a member of the Coeur d'Alene Chamber of Commerce, Coeur d'Alene Eagles and local Rotary. He has either volunteered or supported BikeCDA, EXCEL Foundation, Safe Passage, Toys for Tots, Safe Start, North Idaho Centennial Trail Association, and St. Vincent De Paul.

Nutrition in Action: A Hands-On Mini Class Experience
Misty Roberts, RDN, LD, Nutrition Education Manager, The Idaho Foodbank
This interactive mini nutrition class will model practical meal-building, label-reading, and budget-friendly strategies using pantry staples. Learn how to guide neighbors toward nutritious choices during distributions and discover the nutrition education classes and resources available to support your pantry's effort.

Building the Strengths of the Network
Jana Wolf, Director of Programs and Partnerships, The Idaho Foodbank
In this session, we will share early insights from the Network Assessment and create space for you to connect with partners that are putting Neighbor Centered Practices into action. You will have the opportunity to learn from peers, exchange ideas, and explore approaches you are interested in implementing within your own organization. Our goal is for you to leave with new relationships, practical takeaways, and renewed energy to build on the network's strengths to support our neighbors.

Moscow Annual Partner Conference Agenda

April 8, 2026 - University Inn, Moscow

Setting the Stage for Donor Success
Morgan Wilson, Chief Development Officer, The Idaho Foodbank
Whether you are new to fundraising or looking to deepen donor relationships, this session will share current information and trends on individual philanthropy and equip you to more effectively connect your mission to donors. Participants will walk through a practical "development health check" — a guided reflection on core fundraising practices, donor communications, relationship-building strategies, and systems that support your mission. You'll leave with a clearer understanding of your current strengths, opportunities for growth, and potential next steps.

Strengthening Communities Through Nutrition, Health, & Partnership
Kathy Holland, Director of Health and Nutrition, The Idaho Foodbank
Learn about how Social Determinants of Health data guides our work. Explore how we're expanding into community health and building partnerships between food pantries and healthcare providers to better support neighbors with the food, resources, and connections they need to thrive.

Advocacy: Awareness, Education, Action
Morgan Wilson, Chief Development Officer, The Idaho Foodbank
Advocacy doesn't have to mean politics or policy jargon—it starts with sharing what you see every day in your community. This panel will show how nonprofits like yours are already influencing change at the local, county, and state levels. You'll hear real examples of how lived experience, data, and relationships can raise awareness of the need for food security and shape decisions that directly impact the people we serve. Together, we'll explore how advocacy can be a natural extension of your mission, not an add-on or a risk. Join us to learn how your voice—grounded in service and trust—can help create lasting, systemic impact.

Optional Session: Agency Scenarios in a Shared Learning Space
Lisa Turpin, NC Agency Relations Coordinator, The Idaho Foodbank
This session will tap into our collaborative problem-solving instincts. During this interactive time, a common Agency Challenge will be presented, and then in small groups you'll have an opportunity to share ideas and experiences to problem solve in real time. This session will include a relatable scenario that many Partner Agencies experience. You'll walk away with fresh thinking, practical takeaways, and new connections across the network.
